

The Perfect Plan

In a pretty place not so very far away, people made a point of doing things that start with the letter p.

Every day, people would kneel on posh carpets or floors and say their morning _____.

Then they would get dressed—always prim and proper. Of course, the most popular colors for clothes were _____ and _____.

Children dreamed and planned what they would be when they grew up. Many little children read a particular fairy tale about a prince and a _____. They played house and imagined being _____ just like their moms and dads.

Everyone in this pleasing place planned to have at least one dog or cat or some other _____.

The most important lesson they learned was that God wants all people to be holy. Of course, they learned how to spell and solve math problems, too.

It might be perplexing or puzzling to pinpoint just what God wants people to do. When it takes time to figure things out, we learn to be _____.

Sometimes we might want God to make arrows to _____ us in the right direction. Even without arrows, we can still find plenty of clues.

Some people are good artists. They like to draw and _____. Artists, such as Michelangelo, have provided artwork for Churches and other places.

Another talent is being a good musician. A musician might _____ a big instrument with keys called a _____ or even a very small type of flute called a _____. Perhaps God wants them to be Church musicians or to perform in concert halls to let many people hear their pleasant music.

What about people who like any adventure, meeting new people and exploring new places? This _____ could be a clue that God wants them to become missionaries in far-away lands.

Every single person, whether popular or shy, has a particular place in God's _____. What possibilities can you imagine for what God wants you to be?
